SORTING THE STORY

Put the story into the correct order and describe each scene

Fred takes his car out for his usual weekly 1000 Miles. He's laughing and waving to the other cars as he drives on his way to work. He's feeling so good that he decides to take a short cut through the park. He's not used to driving on the park roads and he's not used to driving on the park roads. He's not used to driving on the park roads. He's not used to driving on the park roads.		<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
		<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
	Fred notices his bees fly into his back yard garden and other gardens in the block. He sees the bees also fly into your yard and garden. If he were there he could see them using their special tongues to drink in flower nectar, which they store in honey sacs inside their bellies. There it will be the next year, for the next summer in the next back yard and garden. If Fred is lucky, he'll be making honey somewhere across town.	<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
	All around a quiet beautiful city - brownstones and brick town, a tall clock tower, and bridges in the distance. Near the edge of the roof is another, tiny city. It has three houses, each with two white rooms and one red door, and inside, thousands of tiny rooms made of wax. It was the inside, the tiny city also seems quiet.	<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
Fred puffs clouds of smoke into the tiny houses, and the bees burrow deep down into the hive.	 From the very top floor, Fred lifts out the honeycomb. He packs it into buckets and says, "Thank you for this honey, bees." Zzzzz!	<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
